

New Catalogue now live

The UKEOF Catalogue

The UKEOF Catalogue provides access to information about environmental observations, offering a unique UK overview. UKEOF have launched a new upgraded version which enables easier access to more up to date information on the UK's monitoring programmes. The upgraded Catalogue will help facilitate joint-working, leading to more comprehensive and efficient monitoring activities.

What's new?

One of the exciting new features that the upgraded Catalogue offers is a mapping search tool. Users can see where observations are being carried out in a certain area, find out where facilities are located or look at the coverage of a specific programme. Other improvements also allow users access to new information such as:

- Which activities are involved in a specific monitoring network
- Which organisation operates in a particular monitoring site
- How many sites collect data for a monitoring programme
- How many monitoring sites an organisation operates in

The UKEOF Catalogue lists environmental observations undertaken and funded by UK public and third sector organisations. More...

The new mapping tool allows location information about observation activities to be displayed, providing an extra dimension to the search capability.

Check your organisation's records

The Catalogue needs input from the community to ensure that the records are up to date. This will help facilitate decision-making that is based on up to date and relevant information. Every organisation can now update its own contents using the new editor tool. Why not check your organisation's records? If they are in need of updating, you can get access to edit your organisation's records by contacting the UKEOF secretariat: office@ukeof.org.uk
